Loyola Ties For League Lead

RESULTS OF GREYHOUND PEACE POLL AFFORD INTERESTING COMPARISON WITH NATIONAL BALLOT

200 STUDENTS VOTE
Loyola Favors Large Army And Air Force; Against League Entry

The results of the Greyhound's Peace Poll are printed below on this page. Nearly two hundred votes were cast in the balloting. The questions were the same as those submitted by the Literary Digest in its official nation-wide poll of over 150 American colleges and universities.

Differences
In all, seven questions relating to war and peace were asked. Loyola's vote differed materially from the national tabulation on two of these seven queries. It is interesting to compare the percentages in the results of the two polls.

In the national vote a great majority believed that we could stay out of another war, while Loyola men by only a scant margin think we can avoid hostilities.

It was a practically unanimous opinion that Loyola would fight if the United States were invaded. In the larger poll a heavy percentage also indicated that they would fight to resist invasion.

Four fifths of the students in both polls said that they would not fight should the United States invade a foreign country.

The question of the necessity of the largest navy and air force being a sound method of insuring peace finds the opinions reversed. A majority at Loyola believe it a sound policy for insuring peace, while nationally the majority of students think the opposite.

Government control of munitions and universal conscription of capital and labor in time of war were given favorable majorities in both polls.

League of Nations
In the national vote the question on which the students were most evenly divided in opinion was on the entry of the United States into the League of Nations. Loyola voted decisively against entry. The recent campaign which resulted in rejection by the Senate of our entrance into the World Court may have influenced this decision. It is also interesting to note that four of the five Catholic colleges that participated in the Literary Digest's Poll also opposed the League of Nations. The Catholic schools were Fordham, Boston College, Detroit University, St. Louis University and St. Stanislaus.

On the one other point of great difference—navy and air force second to none—we find four of these Catholic schools favoring the affirmative as Loyola did, but in opposition to the majority of student opinion nationally.

A PING-PONG TOURNAMENT will be held, beginning Monday, March 18. An entry fee of twenty-five cents will be charged to cover the cost of prizes.

FR. La FARGE LECTURES ON RUSSIAN COMMUNISM

SPEAKS IN LIBRARY
Author And Editor Warns Against The Evils Of Communism

"Our real and greatest danger from Communism is forgetfulness of God—implicit atheism. Only by an heroic reform of our own personal lives can we overcome the influence of Communism." This warning for Catholics was sounded by Father John La Farge, S.J., formerly of the Faculty of Loyola and well-known as an author and Associate Editor of "America", in his lecture on "Communism in Russian Practice Today" given in the Library on February 26.

Giving as the reason for his subject that one sixth of the world's population is being educated in Communism as a religion, Father LaFarge said that our concern is due to its existence as a world system and its effect on our civilization.

Russian Advertising
Russia has succeeded in advertising itself in a way that appeals to our ideals. Beyond a certain point an analysis of this propaganda discloses nothing tangible. The so-called Five Year Plan, which had collective farming as its main point, worked only at the sacrifice of the lives of five million Ukrainians who were deprived of their grain in order that it might be exported.

Big strides have been made in education, but data on

GREYHOUNDS DEFEAT WASHINGTON COLLEGE 34-29 TO TIE MT. ST. MARY'S FOR LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

SENIORS' GREEN & GRAY DANCE BECOMES VICTORY CELEBRATION

HELD ON NIGHT OF TRIUMPH
Team Returns From Shore To Receive Applause From Dancers

The Seniors' Green and Gray Dance, held on the same night that the team defeated Washington College in Chestertown to go into a tie for the league leadership, was turned into a gala victory celebration when the results of the crucial game were announced to the dancers early in the evening.

The scene of the dance, which featured the music of Al Hollander's Orchestra, was the Alumni Gymnasium, at Evergreen. The place where the quint has been laboring since early winter to give Loyola a winner was transformed into a ballroom of gold and blue for the occasion.

The dance committee must have had a premonition of the victory because the dedication of the program said, "Given in appreciation of the praiseworthy efforts of the Greyhounds on the court during the '34-'35 season" and each of the dances on the program was named in honor of one of the players and Coach Bill Liston to lend a further appropriate and unique touch to the evening.

Late in the evening, a rather weary but triumphant squad of basketballers returned and were applauded by those at the dance.

PLAY-OFF NOW NECESSARY

Quint Plays Best Game Of Season As Carney And Taneyhill Stand Out

Amid the chorus of frenzied Maroon rooters, Loyola rose to unprecedented heights as it beat down a stubborn Washington outfit to the score of 34-29, a victory which enabled the 'Hounds to tie Mount St. Mary's for the championship of the Maryland Collegeiate League. A play-off is to be staged, the plans of which are in process of formation.

All Chestertown turned out to witness the most thrilling, the hardest fought, and the best played contest of the season. Not one seat in the town armory was available for fully one-half hour before the game. Just before the whistle, denoting play, one could have heard a pin drop, the spectators were so tense; but once that whistle blew, there was never, at any time, a letup in noise, yelling and what-not. The little band of Loyola rooters, which accompanied the squad, held up their end admirably.

First Half
After a few brief flurries, Skipp charged into Tanney-presenting him with a charity shot. However, Taney, as tense as a stretched rubber band, missed his chance. Directly following this, he gave Ward similar opportunity by holding; but the latter also missed, not only this one, but also another which he received a little later. Two minutes of play were consumed before that play, when Loyola drew first blood as Carney sank a double-decker from beneath the netting. Wilmot of the Flying Pentagon duplicated this feat to tie matters up. But Carney was not to be outdone, so he again put the Green and Gray ahead, this time by three points, as he caged a field goal and a foul. The score stood thus at 5-2 for several minutes as both teams saw shots elude the hoop. Ferrarini, at this point, replaced Colvin and proceeded to ring up two beautiful goals in his unique looping

Dramatics

The announcement that a dramatic society is in the process of organization at Loyola and that Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" will be produced as its initial offering is news and good news.

There is a certain group of students at Evergreen who have been agitating a Loyola dramatic presentation for over a year, both in the columns of the Greyhound and orally. It is to this group that credit is due for at least this renewal and revival of interest in college theatricals which, we trust, is about ready to take its former high place as one of the most important of Loyola's extra-curricular activities.

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their country" might well be changed in order to fit the circumstances to "Now is the time for all good thespians to come to the aid of their dramatic society." The claim has been made that the students want dramatics. It is at least certain that enough students are interested in the matter to start work on a play. But it takes more than just actors to put a show across. Other workers are needed. As in all collegiate activities we must come back to that over-worked phrase "student co-operation." Other fellows will be needed to lend their actual assistance to the project and everyone in a school of this size must give full moral support if we are to make this revival a real thing.

There are a few facts in regard to dramatics we would like to point out at this juncture. Those who desired full faculty support and approval for organized dramatics at Loyola have been granted their request. Through the action of Dean O'Malley and Mr. McCorry, S.J., they have positive evidence of faculty interest.

In putting on "Julius Caesar" as their first presentation to the public, the ambitious dramatists are attempting no mean histrionic feat. To give a proper rendition of Shakespeare's lines for an audience is going to take weeks of intensive work for coach and players.

To the present generation of Loyola students, theatricals may seem an entirely new scholastic activity. But this is not true. Before the college was moved to Evergreen dramatic presentations had a regular place in the sphere of extra-curricular affairs. A publicity build-up (as the press-agents say) to make Loyola dramatic-conscious seems to be in order. The interest has been at least started. Let's have some grounds for maintaining that interest.

Our Thanks

We wish to express our thanks to all, Faculty and students alike, who helped to make the Greyhound Peace Poll successful. We confess that we were a little hesitant in attempting such an undertaking because it was a new function for the Greyhound to perform. But the results seem to justify our trouble. So enthusiastic are we about the idea of expression of student opinion in this manner that we are in a receptive mood for suggestions from the student body as to conducting other polls in the near future.

The questions asked on the poll ballot certainly did cause a great amount of discussion on the campus.

Campus Clippings

B. B. H.

Recently, while thumbing my way home from school, I was pleasantly surprised when a car with a young woman behind the wheel stopped and offered me a lift. I had talked about the weather with the fellow who brought me over in the morning so I felt that I must change the conversation somehow. We finally wound up by talking about automobiles. From that ride came the inspiration to write this.

A Co-Ed's Glossary Of Automobile Terms

Apron:—A garment worn to protect a dress from spots.

Armature:—(1) High-brow for an athlete who competes for a bruised head and for fun. As in, "He is an armature athlete."

(2) As in, "If you are over 21 you are-mature."

Auto:—Phonetic spelling. As in, "I really auto go downtown."

Bumper:—Slang. As in, "In America there is at least one bumper thousand people."

Crank-C a s e:—A straight-jacket.

Cable:—Second name of a popular film star.

Carbureter:—A person who is a continual berater of other folks' cars.

Chassis:—Slang. As in, "Did chassis the new dress I bought?"

Commutator:—A person who lives in the suburbs and takes a train to the city.

Cut-Out:—As in, "Cut-out that nonsense."

Dash Board:—An indoor racetrack.

Garage:—An offensive measure used in war maneuvers. As in, "The enemy laid down a blistering garage."

Hood:—A garment worn at graduation exercises.

Knee-Action:—Legal action taken by a woman to regain her maiden name. As in, "Mrs. Stella Blight, 'knee' Stella Torsh."

Running-Board:—Not to be confused with board-walk.

Shock-Absorber:—The hindmost portion of the anatomy.

Skidding:—Slang. As in, "Aw, quit your skidding."

Timer and Distributor:—Parts played by Dad when fellows who call on me stay too late.

Tonneau:—A heavy weight. As in, "He hit that line like a tonneau bricks."

Wrist Pin:—Some sort of a wrestling hold.

Water-Jacket:—A bathing suit which can really be worn in the water.

Worn Plugs:—Horses who have arrived at the end of their usefulness.

Evergreen Reflections

Erratic Agin

What about a "Who's Who" for the whole college? Just imagine Bernie Hoffman taking the part of Julius Caesar in the forthcoming production. Whow! What a crowd of fellows would be needed to carry him off the stage at the moment of his sudden demise! Talking about a play and so on, what is the matter with the fellows? They all seemed to want a college play. Why don't they come out for it, now that one is in the offing? It is hard to find a safe driver in any college. That is a crazy statement to make... but so are the drivers. When the girls from Notre Dame came to the basketball game did'ya notice how the Sophs started to move. They haven't been doing so bad either... the Sophs, I mean. Notice the beautiful spring weather we've been having lately. The above line would be very satirical now, if there was snow on the ground the day this paper comes out. Everybody but the Seniors are counting the days till school's over. Seniors, poor lads! they do say that jobs are scarce. A picture of irony: Roger Lewis nodding to a Spanish girl at a recent basketball game. He thought she was another girl of the same beautiful type, and she knew exactly what he was thinking. At least he was complimentary to both of them. A portrait of dejection: Fritz Niemoeller, when another fellow walks with, or talks to his girl. And yet he was voted the class optimist! A caricature: Ace Knight in any position, in any place. A nutty idea: Send all the decrepit and aged folks to war and thus preserve the young blood of the country. A nuttier idea: Send the little kids and cut down excess population. Did'ya ever catch the thought behind the school colors "Green & Gray?" You're Green when you come in and Gray when yuh leave,—if you ever do. Someone just laughed. That crack ahead must be purty good.

Your Pal

He is a blond Teuton. A naturally slothful fellow, never overanxious. He takes things for granted and if they are not granted he takes them any way. He likes all the girls that like him. The ones don't he doesn't know. He always needs a shave, sleep and a few other necessities. He lives for love and loves. He thinks and really believes that college is only a stage that takes four years to cross, with a couple stops for conditions and visits to the dean. Shakespeare was referring to him when he wrote: "Ambition should be made of stronger stuff. But aside from all such silly banter he is a good fellow. If you were a sick person he would be the very one you would enjoy walking with; he walks so slowly. If you ever chance to see him walking up Charles Street, don't stop to talk to him for you will have to walk his pace and therefore be late for your engagement, as he often is.

He wakes up enlarged of head, of tongue and devoid of mental perspective. So this is one of those vicious circles philosophers rave so much about. If only he could grab that mast-head—I mean bed-posts—at the crest of one of those waves. Ah, at last! He straightens up shakily, with a death grip on the bed-post. He makes his way with difficulty to the bath-room. He douses his tousled head with icy water. He begins to see the light, but in a dark manner. Wait! The water is penetrating to his brain. He reasons that it must be Tuesday, because only Monday could have made him feel so low. Down again! If this is Tuesday, then he has a chemistry test. What a day to struggle through a test!

He takes his morning ablutions and sartorial operations so that he hasn't time for more than a cup of coffee. He catches a car and for the entire trip to school he sinks into a lethargic state halfway between nausea and coma. He arrives at the college and is accosted by one of his exuberant classmates. He wonders why some people are always effervescing with good cheer when he feels so low; he could double for the bait in a fishing scene. His courage rises when he is blithely informed that there is no test and moreover that it is Monday and not really Tuesday as he had thought. The first period is always dull so he gathers some long-lost sleep. The following periods throughout the day are even duller than the first so there is nothing for him to do but to stagger from one room to another, only waking up in time for each bell. Life has anything but a rosy complexion today. A naturally weak spirit, a pair of unusually weak knees and an even weaker head constitutes his physical and mental makeup. He's not so hot.

MESSRS. OSBORNE AND MARTIN SPEAK BEFORE CHEM SEMINAR

VALUE OF CHEMIST SHOWN

"Tungsten," by John C. Osborne, '37 and "Perfumes," by J. Leo Martin, '37 were the subjects of papers read before the Chemistry Seminar on February 26.

In an extremely interesting fashion Mr. Osborne spoke of tungsten. . . "That metal which is so tremendous a value in commerce and industry."

In the short time at his disposal the speaker covered the history, occurrence, chemical and physical properties of the metal and concluded with mention of the manifold uses to which it is put.

"The greatest use of tungsten is in the preparation of iron or steel alloys. The metal is used in quantity as filaments for incandescent lamps."

Discussing "Perfumes," Mr. Martin showed the importance of the chemist in this difficult art.

Extraction of the essential oils, blending, fixation, and other problems of interest to the chemist were discussed.

During the course of the lecture the fact was brought out that so complex is the chemistry of perfumes that there are only three perfume chemists in the entire country.

CONTEMPORARY HISTORY CLUB DISCUSSES COURT'S DECISION

MEMBERS OFFER OPINIONS

The Contemporaneous history Seminar met on February 25, to discuss the Supreme Court decision on the gold clause. Mr. Doehler, the Moderator, introduced the topic, saying that there were three decisions handed down, affecting:

1. Corporation bonds sold to individuals.
2. Gold-backed certificates.
3. Liberty bonds which were floated during the war.

Those objecting to the decisions of the Supreme Court held that gold clause bonds, whether between an individual and the government, or between corporations and individuals, were nothing more than receipts for a definite amount of gold; that this did not impede Congress from regulating the value of money; that the contracts were just and legitimate; that they were made to protect both of the contracting parties from excessive loss; that Congress had no jurisdiction over such contracts, and that they were property and could not be confiscated by the government without just compensation.

DR. HUGGINS ADDRESSES LOYOLA CHEMISTRY CLUB

Dr. Maurice L. Huggins, of Johns Hopkins, addressing the Loyola Chemistry Club, spoke on "Application of X-Rays to Chemical Problems." Dividing his talk into two main divisions, Dr. Huggins first explained the nature and production of X-Rays, and secondly the nature of matter as regards its composition. He then gave the uses to which X-Rays could be put in the determination of the nature of certain substances.

X-Rays, he said, were produced either by electronic bombardment or bombardment by other X-Rays; and the radiations were of two kinds, general and characteristic.

Composition

Matter is essentially composed of molecules or atoms, large numbers of which are joined together to form what are known as giant molecules. Different substances differ in the amount of X-Rays they will absorb; the absorption in general depending on the number of electrons in the atom of the substance. By means of X-Rays passing through a crystal and determining the way in which the ray is absorbed or reflected, the nature of the crystal can be found.

Dr. Huggins stated that "the application of X-Rays to chemistry concerns diffraction effects," such applications having resulted in the testing for and finding of new elements, and studying the structure of crystals, liquids, glasses, gases and

Sociology Club Lecture

"The Problem of Narcotics" was the topic chosen by Giulio D'Ambrogi, '35, at the last meeting of the Sociology Club.

"The term opiate addiction or narcosis is a definite pathological condition. It may be described as a physiological process in which the nervous system is deprived, by the agency of a diminished blood supply, of its vital characteristics with greater or less rapidity," said the speaker.

"The principle effects produced by narcotic agents are: mental disturbances, disturbances of sensibility, muscular affections, disturbances of secretion, alteration of circulation and of respiration."

Two methods of cure are in use: absolute withdrawal and gradual withdrawal. In the first case the patient is confined and allowed no drug supply. This method is in use in the Maryland Penitentiary. The method of gradual withdrawal consists in gradually decreasing the amount of drug and in building up the shattered nervous system.

Mr. D'Ambrogi concluded by mentioning some of the advances made in recent years and pointed out the need for further study of this difficult and pitiful problem.

surfaces. Dr. Huggins predicted that "in the future chemistry would be taught in a different manner." He declared that "the student, instead of memorizing properties and principles, would start from atoms and molecules, and build up those properties and principles on a reasonable basis."

higher studies is vague. All education is directed to forming revolutionary organizations in other countries.

Ideas on Peace

The Russian leaders say, "We are for peace." Yet on the otherhand they try to incite internal dissension in other countries for the overthrow of capitalism. "They advocate peace only for the negative reason that there be no attack on the Soviet regime."

"All this advertising is idealistic trash and good for bourgeois consumption. But the doctrines of anti-religion and world revolution have not been very appealing and so have been emphasized only to a select group of peoples."

The people of the United States are not fundamentally Communistic, but the Communists are winning people by practical Christian charity. "Catholics must meet all peoples on a common ground. We must give the people something better than Communism."

Next Lecture

The next lecture in this series on "Communitic Philosophy and Atheistic Theology" will be given on Friday, March 8 by Dr. Elizabeth Morrissey, Professor of History at Notre Dame College. Her subject will be "The Communitic Trinity: Marx, Lenin and Stalin."

Alumni Doings

W. D. McG.

The Philomath Society, an organization made up of graduates of Catholic Colleges and devoted to study of Catholic position on questions of the day, will include several members of the alumni as the speakers at its next meeting, which will be held on Thursday, March 7, at Loyola High School.

The members of the alumni of Loyola College that that will speak are: George Renahan, '18; Albert Sehlstedt, '19; Joseph Blair, '29; Henry Casey, '21; Joseph Garland, '18; Clarence Caulfield, '22.

These lectures will be held under the auspices of the Catholic League for Social Justice in Baltimore. Rev. Ferdinand C. Wheeler, S.J., ex '05, is director of the league.

Other meetings will be held on Thursdays, March 14 and 21.

Lumina

We're great ones for starting new names since we rechristianed this column, and the urge has never left us. Our recent brainstorm came to us one day when we decided that it would be nice if we had a section in the column in which we could present mythical orchids to members of the alumni who have been honored or have distinguished themselves in their respective fields. It came to us one day when we were about to fall asleep in the middle of a class. It suddenly struck us that the Latin word "lumina" is an anagram of alumni. "Lumina," as most of you already know, means 'brightest lights.' We translate it in the sense that it means 'leaders' or 'standard-bearers.' So, here we go:

The following alumni are employed by the Baltimore Emergency Relief Commission:

Al Petersam, '34, recently secured a position with the agency.

Tom Houff, '33, has been with them quite some time.

Frank Moran, '32, former editor of the Greyhound.

Well, that's the end of the 'Lumina' column until the next time.

CARD PARTY

The Card Party held recently in the Evergreen Gymnasium for the benefit of the College was a gratifying success. The students and friends of Loyola loyally supported the event, and to them I wish to express my sincere thanks. In particular, I offer my congratulations and thanks to the efficient and energetic Committee, to whom we are primarily indebted for a pleasing and successful event.

Nice Going, Fellows

Congratulations to you, Bill Liston; it was a hard up-hill fight, but you did it! Very seldom does a young coach in his first year at the helm achieve the success which is yours. 'Tis true that the season is not quite over with those play-offs staring us in the face, but, nevertheless, the regular season is, and for that I am acclaiming you and your squad. Ten victories and seven defeats is not anything to rave about, but when one considers the size of the players and compares them with each of their opponents, one cannot help but admire the accomplishment of said players. Winning, or at least tying for the State championship is no small task in itself by any means. It takes a club that can take it as well as give it; it requires one that plays as a unit; and it also requires that such a team must be up on its toes at all times in order that it be prepared for any emergency whatsoever. And so with Loyola; no quintet in the league had as many close battles as our Greyhounds. No team in the circuit was put to the acid test as many times as our boys, and was able to come through like champions. Even our rivals, the Mountaineers, were never pressed nearly so much as Loyola to prove that they are real champions. Having the advantage of playing half their games on their tricky floor at Emmitsburg, on which few teams unfamiliar with it can win, seems to argue against them. Incidentally, come to think of it, if they truly want to show themselves superior to Loyola, they should consent to play all the play-off games on a neutral floor where neither team is benefited more than the other. I suggest Frederick Armory and Johns Hopkins' Gymnasium.

Two Officials

Another thing which I trust will be strongly considered by the two colleges is that of having a pair of officials at each game. It has been remarked quite a bit that the officiating of the Maryland league games has been somewhat loose. That is no fault of the arbiters for they certainly call them as they see them; but the real trouble is that one man cannot thoroughly cover the action in a fast game. What I urge, then, is not one better official, but two officials. After all, two of them can see things twice as fast as one can, especially on a big court. I hope that the league solons will get wise to themselves and supply the forthcoming series with a referee and an umpire at each game.

style. However, Wilmot again cut the lead by a neat one-hand shot from the corner. Horowitz entered the fray in place of Salter. On resumption of play, Ward missed another free-throw, whereas "Birch" Carney sank another gift shot, immediately followed by Taneyhill with two more. Here, the Kiblerites rallied and brought the score from 12-4 to 15-0 in Loyola's favor at the half. The outstanding players of the period were Carney, Taneyhill and Horowitz.

Second Half

The identical lineups that ended the previous session took to the floor this half. Colvin had already replaced Kelly. The Sho'men, returning with grim determination, quickly set about slicing the lead until they finally gained it for themselves. Skipp caged his lone field goal from the pivot position; Horowitz, fouled by Taneyhill, made two; Carney, on a pass from Colvin, dropped another; Huffman added two shots from outside the foul circle to give his mates the lead for the first time at 18-17. Salter and Colvin obliged for their respective teams, after which Carney was fouled by Skipp, who was ejected because of his fourth offense.

Tom missed that one for his only faux-pas of the evening. Colvin regained the lead on a spectacular overhead one-hand shot; but with ten minutes to go, Washington again forged ahead on Horowitz's goal. Carney came through again with another of his clean shots to return the lead to Loyola. A timeout was called by the locals to regain their bearings for the last five minutes. Everyone was nervous with excitement; rather, all but Salter, who ripped the cords for five points after the brief respite. That was their last stand, for goals by Kelly, who was sent in for Colvin, Carney and Taneyhill, besides the fouls by Wayson and Carney were sufficient to overcome the four point lead and to go ahead by five points at 34-29 as the game ended.

Loyola Trims Hopkins Quint In Overtime Contest At Homewood

Loyola defeated Hopkins in an overtime game at Homewood by a score of 27-24. From a critical viewpoint, the game was a poor one, but from the viewpoint of an ordinary spectator, there could not have been a more thrilling contest.

The game opened slowly, five minutes elapsing before Taneyhill tapped in a rebound to open the scoring. Another basket by Taneyhill, and an outside shot by Ferrarini increased the Loyola lead to six points. The 'Hounds maintained this lead throughout the first period, holding the advantage by 14-8 at the half.

The second half was even more ragged than the first. Wild shooting, bad passing, and poor ball handling being much in evidence. Despite these faults, with only three minutes of play remaining, the Greyhounds still held their six point advantage. But baskets by Chancellor and Siverd of the Blue Jays tied the score, necessitating an extra period.

Finally goals by Taneyhill and Wayson, aided by Colvin's foul shot, gave the Loyola team an advantage which Hopkins, despite a last minute goal by Siegel, could not overcome.

COLLEGE FIVE WINS, 32-25, AS JOHNNY QUINT RALLIES IN VAIN

Kelly Leads Greyhounds To Victory Over Annapolis Five In Tilt

Loyola, fighting to gain a tie with the league-leading Mountaineers, took the Johnnies at Annapolis in the queerest game of the season to the tune of 32-25. The Crabtowners, having nothing to lose by a defeat, made it very uncomfortable for the anxious Greyhounds, especially towards the closing minutes of the game when the players were continually shifting their positions in order to confuse more, an already rattled five. Despite this harassing maneuver and despite the presence of Johnny Lambros, who overcame scholastic difficulties to play in the tussle, Loyola maintained the lead, which she had snatched in the first five minutes of play at 8-6, until the finish. However, many events occurred in the interim which characterized it as one of those Maryland Collegiate games where anything can happen! As soon as Loyola had secured this lead, the team opened up and really appeared to be going places. Led by Joe Kelly, the colors of Green and Gray were hoisted to the topmost position of League basket-ball as Loyola played the cleverest and most faultless type of ball that any league quint so far this year has shown. The score at the end of the half was 25-11.

Complete Reversal of Form

At the outset of the final session, Dutch Lentz, Johnny coach, had a hunch and played it for all it was worth. Lambros, the 5 ft. 9 in. forward was shifted to center to oppose Taneyhill! Naturally, Loyola had no trouble at the jump; but their floor game suffered tremendously as the players became confused at the Johnny tactics. Here the team underwent a complete form reversal in their offensive as well as their defensive play. In fifteen minutes the Orange and Black had crept up to three points of the 'Hounds at 25-22—and Loyola hadn't as yet scored a point! However, with their lead imperiled, the boys found themselves and outscored the locals by 7-3 in the remaining five minutes.

While Loyola was winning this game, Washington College was defeating Western Maryland. This set the stage for the crucial game in Chestertown to decide who would play-off for the championship with Mt. St. Mary's which had already assured itself of first place, a week before.

Mt. St. Mary's Defeats 'Hounds With Strong 2nd Half Offensive

Sagadelli Stars For Mounts Who Win 23-28 Game At Evergreen

Mt. St. Mary's basketball team led by Joe Sagadelli, the tall and lanky forward who hails from Boston, Mass., completely overwhelmed the Greyhounds of Loyola with a strong second-half offensive, which netted them 23 points. The final score was 36-28.

For the greater part of the first period the two teams matched goal for goal. Neither team gained more than a four point advantage. Then with only a few minutes of playing time remaining in that period, Loyola scored three times in succession to gain a five point lead over the Malloymen; score 18-13.

Up to this time Tom Carney, Loyola guard, was high scorer for the Greyhounds with three baskets, while Sagadelli and Leahy shared honors for the Mountaineers with two apiece.

Mounts Gain Lead

After five minutes of the second half the taller, heavier lads from up-state had caught up to, and passed the Evergreen team. With ten minutes left to play they had obtained a six point lead, and were continually widening the gap between them and the locals. Finally they stretched the lead to twelve points, 36 to 24. Then Carney scored a field goal, which was followed by another one by Wayson as the period ended.

In the second half Loyola was out-scored by thirteen points. Sagadelli, with seven goals in thirteen attempts, gave a great exhibition of shooting. He also led the scoring with fifteen points. Tom Carney was outstanding for Loyola with eight points.

As a result of this defeat, the Greyhounds dropped into a tie for second place in the league standings. Mount St. Mary's assured themselves of the title, or at least a tie for it, by this win.

MEXICAN QUESTION TOPIC OF SODALITY DISCUSSION

At the last meeting of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, Father John A. Risacher, S. J., Moderator, continued his interesting and informative discourse on the Mexican situation. He outlined the growth of the present persecutions side by side, with the evolution of the various political factions. The policy of the National Revolution Party, he explained, was to overthrow capitalism and to create in children "love for the exploited masses," while tearing them from the clergy and analyzing religion for them "in the light of reason and science."

Bill Passed

On October 20, 1934, a bill was passed by the Chamber and approved by the Mexican Senate, demanding:

1. Immediate expulsion of Bishops and Archbishops as enemies of the revolution.
2. Suppression of the press.
3. Purging of government affairs of all non-sympathetic employees.

Later in the same year, Father Risacher said, the Six Year Plan was passed by the Congress giving the Mexican President special powers and spreading the reign of socialism to all the schools. Even before the plan, the State had become the constitutional owner of all Church property, and under this plan, the government strengthened their socialistic school program.

At the next meeting, the Sodality will decide on some work or special services befitting the season of Lent.

Freshmen Discuss Federal Aid For Public Schools In Debate

The Freshmen held their third debate of the year on Wednesday, February 20, on the question: Resolved: That federal aid should be granted to the public school system of the various states. The negative side, composed of Messrs. Fisher and Maguire, was awarded the decision by the judges, Messrs. Elko, Selhorst, and Mellen-deck. The affirmative side was upheld by Messrs. Carey and Clifford.

It was announced at the meeting that the next meeting of the Freshman Debating Society would be held tomorrow, with Messrs. Eisinger, Balcerzak, Murray and Fitzpatrick as the participants. The topic will be: Resolved: That there should be Government control of railroads.

I like the way it tastes... there's plenty of taste there.

Chesterfield is mild, not strong... and that's another thing I like in a cigarette.

What's more, They Satisfy... and that's what I like a cigarette to do.

I get a lot of pleasure out of Chesterfield... you know I like that cigarette.
